Marathon

Dublin is an ancient city founded by the Vikings over 1,000 years ago. Today it's a vibrant city, with over 1 million inhabitants - famous for its beautiful Georgian architecture, literary history, pubs and nightlife and of course the friendly Irish folk! The Dublin Marathon starts and finishes in the city centre. It's a fairly flat single lap passing through many of Dublin's famous 18th century Georgian streets and the beautiful Phoenix Park, Europe's largest urban park. Conditions for marathon running are ideal. The Irish climate is influenced by the prevailing light South Westerly winds of the Gulf Stream and the average temperatures for October are usually an ideal 12 - 14°C (53 - 57°F). The start is staggered from 9am, usually in 4 waves and takes place the day before a public holiday in Ireland. Hosting one of Europe's largest marathons it's a race that sells out early - maximum 21,000 runners. Runners and walkers are welcome and all have 7 hours to finish this marathon distance.
